Newport Beach, CA – November 8, 2008 – Strategic Global Advisors, LLC (“SGA”) welcomes, William Borland, CFA, to the firm’s Advisory Board. Bill Borland retired in September from Russell where he served in various capacities for more than a decade. Most recently he was Russell’s Managing Director of Sales, Service and Relationship Management for Russell Investment group’s institutional business. James Barrett, Russell’s Managing Director of Investment Services notes, “Bill’s contributions to Americas Institutional over the past twelve years are significant and we will miss his passion to win and leadership, but mostly his humanness.”

Bill served as national sales director at Russell where his primary responsibility was to manage Russell’s US institutional sales group. Bill shares that, “My decision to retire from Russell was a difficult one, but I have been looking forward to a point in my life where I can dedicate more time to my community and church. With this move, serving on the Advisory Board of SGA allows me to also stay involved in the asset management industry. I look forward to helping SGA. They are a team of professionals that have successfully built a firm that can grow rapidly and develop cutting edge strategies that are well suited to these challenging markets.”

Also serving on SGA’s Advisory Board are Richard Frankel, Professor of Finance at Washington University in St. Louis, and Alison Davis, managing partner of Belvedere Capital and former CFO of Barclays Global Investors. “SGA’s advisory board offers us the opportunity for collaboration with leaders in academia as well as extensive dialogue with experts in the field of asset management,” explains Cynthia Tusan, President of SGA.

Bill Borland is also involved in the “For the Children” program, a non-profit organization that offers Belarusian children in need a health respite from the after effects of the Chernobyl accident, an effort for which he won the Jane T. Russell “Heart and Soul”
